Job's Struggle To Understand Life
Experience, observation, history and the Bible prove that suffering is a reality in the lives of God's children. No child of God will entirely escape suffering in this life.
These are times when we wonder why, God, who is so good and kind and loving and merciful to all his children, should ever permit suffering to come into their lives. Job, who was one of the world's greatest sufferers, was perplexed over the same question.
A study of his troubles and sufferings should be helpful to us.

I. Job's Character, Job 1:1 Job was a man who lived in the land of Uz, which was located in the Arabian desert, not far from the Euphrates. It is generally believed that he lived about the time of Abraham.

Job was a man of sincerity, uprightness, integrity, consistency and piety. He was faithful to the trust that was reposed in him. He was not selfish, and never pretended to be, but he feared God, did that which was right and hated evil.
God blessed him with a large,
active and happy family, as well with great riches. Apparently his riches consisted principally of great flocks and herds of live stock.
And he had come into possession of these in an honest manner. His life pleased God so well that He said of him, "there is none like him in the earth." What commendation!

II. Job's Cry, Job 19:7-10

Satan challenged God's statements about Job's character. He contended that if Job's possessions were destroyed and he were afflicted that he would curse God to his face. And God accepted his chalenge. When Satan accused Job of being good merely because of his prosperity, God gave him permission to test him in any manner
which he desired except the taking of his life. Here we note the mystery of God's permissive will.
We also note that even though he is a mighty being, there are limits to Satan's power.

Satan did not lose any time in using God's permission to test Job.
All of Job's property was swept away from him. The richest man in the east became a beggar in one day. That in itself would have driven many into absolute despair.

Mrs. Bailey Gives Lesson At Creative Arts Meet Monday

The Creative Arts Department of the Murray Woman's Club met at the club house Monday afternoon at two o'clock.

Mrs. H. B. Bailey, Jr., gave the lesson on "Braiding Rugs." She gave the different steps from cutting the strips to finishing off the last braid and how to avoid cup-ping.

The members had material to start their own rugs. Mrs. Bailey gave hints on dyeing old material to obtain softer colors and fading colors with soap and water to produce soft colors.

Mrs. and Mrs. Bailey have finished a rug and a 3x7 rug for their home. One of these was on display at the meeting.

Mrs. Otis Patton, chairman, presided at the meeting. Mrs. Harold Douglas was elected vice-chairman. Eight of the department members will help in the registration for the TB x-ray trailer on October 4.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Henry Holton
and Mrs. Robert Miller.

All of his children were killed in a terrible storm. To this sorrow Job responded in the words, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Then Job was smitten with loathsome boils from head to feet. This condition caused him to lose his position. The "greatest man in the east" was compelled to sit "among ashes," scraping the terrible sores on his poor body. Perhaps the hardest blow of all that he suffered was when his wife, with whom he had shared the days of prosperity, failed him.
She urged him to give up his faith in God and commit suicide. His three friends presumably came to comfort him, but their insinuations actually added to his troubles. They maintained that his afflictions were an evidence that he had been living a double life.

From the midst of the furnace of affliction Job cried out, but he was not able to pray satisfactorily.
It seemed to him that his way was dark, and his glory was removed because he had been accused of being unrighteous. In his humiliation he was unable to understand why he had been afflicted thus. Even though he was completely baffled as to why Job relished that his afflictions were all due to the permissive or the directive will of God. He remarked, "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him."
Job 13:15.

III. Job's Confidence, Job 23:3-10

In the terrible agony of his af-liction, it seemed that Job had lost the sense of the nearness of God. When he uttered the cry which we have just considered as to why Job relished that his afflictions were all due to the permissive or the directive will of God, he said, "yet will I trust in Him."
Job 13:15.

Job was exceedingly anxious to approach God, to talk with Him,
and to lay his case before Him.
He was convinced that if he could get into God's presence and tell Him all about his case that He would have compassion on him and supply his needs. He felt sure that God would vindicate his righteousness and exonerate him from the false insinuations to which he had been subjected. On the basis of God's mercies toward him,
and his former victories through Him, Job expressed his confidence in His support, provided he could lay his case before Him. But, for some wise and blessed purpose,
Job God seemed to evade him.

In spite of the fact that Job did not understand why God dealt thus with him, he was sure that He had some good purpose in permitting him to suffer as he did.
He maintained an implicit faith in God and determined that he would remain true and faithful to Him regardless of what it cost.

Southern Bell Will Ask For Rehearing

The increase in telephone rates authorized in the September 1st Order of the Public Service Commission fails by more than one million dollars to provide Southern Bell the earnings the Commission intended to provide. Homer G. Bartee, Southern Bell General Manager for Kentucky, said today, after completing a detailed study of the order.

Mr. Bartee said the Company will ask the Commission on rehearing to fix rates that will provide the earnings the Commission said in its Order were required for the Company.

In his statement Mr. Bartee said "analysis of the Order shows that the new schedule of rates cannot be made to produce earnings of 6% as intended by the Commission. In fact, the new rates will produce earnings of only about 5 1/2% at the present time, making no allowance for the factors which the Commission recognized will depress earnings even further in the very near future."

Mr. Bartee referred to that part of the Commission opinion which reads, "while rates prescribed here-in will produce revenues slightly higher than we believe would be produced... nevertheless we must recognize certain factors that will in the near future tend to depress these earnings. An aggressive rural development program increases in employee compensation, and other expense adjustments will in our opinion reduce these theoretical earnings to the neighborhood of 6 per cent."

"Testimony presented in the case showed that such reduction in earnings would continue and should be provided for in the new rates. From its Order, it is obvious the Commission intended to make allowance for these factors. However, the rates established are not sufficient to provide the rate of return which the Commission intended the Company should have. It is this discrepancy which the Company will ask the Commission to correct in the rehearing."

Tears for the Bride

CHAPTER ONE
ONE GRAY Thursday afternoon in November Sandy Hollis said to me, "Jim, do you like to hunt?" I lowered the sports page of my Cleveland newspaper and gazed across the office at her. Sandy was not only a good secretary, but easy to look at. She had brown hair which almost exactly matched her eyes, a faint scattering of freckles over her short nose, and long, handsome legs. "Man or beast?" I asked.
"Birds," she said. "Ring-necked pheasants."
"Sure," I said. "I'll use my 32."
"Quit bragging," she laughed. "When James Tobias Bennett, the famous private investigator, can't find a pheasant with a revolver—unless it was sitting. And one doesn't shoot sitting birds."
"Well me more," I said, folding the paper.
Sandy pushed her chair back from the typewriter and crossed her legs. "I had a letter from Dad today. He says there are a lot of birds on the place this fall. He wants me to come down for some shooting. He's got plenty of guns, and Mom's fried chicken is super, and Ralph will be there, and some other people. It'll be kind of a party."
"Who's Ralph?" I asked. "The boy cried?" I realized instantly that I shouldn't have said it. I knew that Sandy didn't have a boy friend—hadn't for a long time. She had been engaged to a pilot, and three or four months previously he had reported missing on a test flight over the Pacific.
"She was clouded for just an instant, and then she smiled. "It's my brother," she said. "He's just been discharged from the army. We haven't seen him for over a year."
"How's he?" I asked. "I want to see what a pilot looks like."
"You'll come, then?"
"Sandy's face seemed attracted to me. "If you really want to."

"Good. I'll call home tonight. I got up, put on my hat and overcoat."
"Where're you going?"
"Out to buy a hunting license." She looked pleased. "We'll leave tomorrow afternoon, and come back on Sunday."
"Tally-ho," I said, and went out. The Hollis farm was about a hundred miles southwest of Cleveland near a village called Ridge Center. It was pleasant driving in the crisp sunshine with Sandy beside me and the radio tuned to a program of soft dance music. Although Sandy had been with the agency for over two years, she had never told me much about her family. Now, as we drove along, I learned that her brother, Ralph, was a year younger than she and was engaged to marry a girl named Eileen Fortune. "She's a nice girl," Sandy said. "But I think I liked Judy better."
"Who's Judy?"
"Judy Kirkland. We all thought she and Ralph would get married, but just before Ralph went into the service they had some kind of a quarrel—and the next we knew Ralph was engaged to Eileen. Judy's—well, a little wild, maybe—but I like her. She has, oh, more personality than Eileen." She paused and sighed. "I guess it'll work out all right, but I just hope that Ralph's engagement to Eileen wasn't one of those rebound things."
"Second choice is best choice—sometimes," I said.
"Why didn't you ever get married, Jim?"
"I guess I'm not the Parent-Teacher's association type. Maybe, if I ever get a regular nine to five job, I might scout around and see if I can find a woman who'll have me."
"Have you ever been in love?"
"Madly," I said, "but she married a wholesale grocer from Columbus."
"Don't be. She's fat now, and stout."
"How horrible," she said, laughing.

"I'm glad she didn't marry you."
"So am I," I said sincerely. It was five-thirty when we drove into the barnyard of the Hollis farm and stopped beneath a towering windmill. A tall, lean man with a tanned, leathery face came from around a corner of a fine, big white barn and waved at us. He was wearing blue overalls over a heavy gray sweater and a sheepskin cap with the ear flaps turned up. Sandy got out of the car and ran to him. They embraced, and she led him over to me. He had a shy smile and clear, friendly blue eyes.
"Glad to meet you, Mr. Bennett," he said, as we shook hands. "Sandy has written us a lot about you."
"Call me Jim," I said, smiling at him.
"All right, Jim. My name's Homer." He smiled his shy smile. "You don't look much like a detective—not, leastways, the way I figured a detective should look."
Sandy said, "Dad was a little dubious about my starting work in a detective agency. He thought I should get a respectable job in an insurance office, or a bank, I guess."
Homer Hollis smiled ruefully. "Well, after hearing some of those radio programs..."
"You should see the television stories," Sandy said. She pointed a finger and cocked a thumb. "Bang! Bang!" She looked up at the roof of the house. "I don't see an aerial yet, Dad."
"Not yet," Homer sighed. "But the pressure is on—especially since Ralph came home."
"How is Ralph?" Sandy asked. Homer shook his head slowly. "He's not the same boy, Sandy. Kind of moody, and he's thin. I'm a little worried about him—but don't say anything to your mother."
Sandy's brown eyes clouded. "Maybe, after he's home a while..."
"Maybe," Homer said, and took my arm. "Come on in, Jim. That wind's raw."

Job's Struggle To Understand Life

Experience, observation, history and the Bible prove that suffering is a reality in the lives of God's children. No child of God will entirely escape suffering in this life. There are times when we wonder why God, Who is so good and kind and loving and merciful to all His children, should ever permit suffering to come into their lives. Job, who was one of the world's greatest sufferers, was perplexed over the same question. A study of his troubles and sufferings should be helpful to us.

I. Job's Character, Job 1:1. Job was a man who lived in the land of Uz, which was located in the Arabian desert, not far from the Euphrates. It is generally believed that he lived about the time of Abraham. Job was a man of integrity, sincerity, uprightness, integrity, consistency and piety. He was faithful to the trust that was reposed in him. He was not selfish, and never pretended to be, but he feared God, did that which was right and hated evil. God blessed him with a large active and happy family, with great riches. Apparently his riches consisted principally of great flocks and herds of live stock. And he had come into possession of these in an honest manner. His life pleased God so well that He said of him, "there is none like him in the earth." What commendation!

II. Job's Cry, Job 1:7-10

Satan challenged God's statement about Job's character. He contended that if Job's possessions were destroyed and he were afflicted that he would curse God to his face. And God accepted his challenge. When Satan accused Job of being good merely because of his prosperity, God gave him permission to test him in any manner which he desired except the taking of his life. Here we note the mystery of God's permissive will. We also note that even though he is a mighty being, there are limits to Satan's power. Satan did not lose any time in using God's permission to test Job. All of Job's property was swept away from him. The richest man in the east became a bankrupt in one day. That in itself would have driven many into absolute despair.

Mrs. Bailey Gives Lesson At Creative Arts Meet Monday

The Creative Arts Department of the Murray Woman's Club met at the club house Monday afternoon at two o'clock.

Mrs. H. B. Bailey, Jr. gave the lesson on "Bridging Rugs." She gave the different steps from cutting the strips to finishing off the last braid and how to avoid cupping.

The members had material to start their own rugs. Mrs. Bailey gave hints on dyeing old material to obtain softer colors and fading colors with soap and water to produce soft colors.

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey have finished a 9x12 and a 3x7 rug for their home. One of these was on display at the meeting.

Mrs. Otis Patton, chairman, presided at the meeting. Mrs. Harold Ruppel was elected vice-chairman. Eight of the department members will help in the registration for the TB x-ray trailer on October 4.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Henry Holton and Mrs. Robert Miller.

All of his children were killed in a terrible storm. To this sorrow Job responded in the words, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Then Job was smitten with loathsome boils from head to foot. This condition caused him to lose his position. The "greatest man in the east" was compelled to sit "among ashes," scraping the terrible sores on his poor body. Perhaps the hardest blow of all that he suffered was when his wife, with whom he had shared the days of prosperity, failed him. She urged him to give up his faith in God and commit suicide. His three friends presumably came to comfort him, but their insinuations actually added to his troubles. They maintained that his afflictions were an evidence that he had been living a double life.

From the midst of the furnace of affliction Job cried out, but he was not able to pray satisfactorily. It seemed to him that his way was enclosed, his pathway was dark, and his glory was removed because he had been accused of being unrighteous. In his humiliation he was unable to understand why he had been afflicted thus. Even though he was completely baffled as to why Job relished that his afflictions were all due to the permissive or the directive will of God. He remarked, "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him." Job 13:15.

III. Job's Confidence, Job 23:3-10

In the terrible agony of his affliction, it seemed that Job had lost the sense of the nearness of God. When he uttered the cry which we have just considered Job was in great distress. He felt that he had come to the supreme crisis in his life, when none but God could avail. Job preferred death to life without the conscious presence of God.

Job was exceedingly anxious to approach God, to talk with Him, and to lay his case before Him. He was convinced that if he could get into God's presence and tell Him all about his case that He would have compassion on him and supply his needs. He felt sure that God would vindicate his righteousness and exonerate him from the false insinuations to which he had been subjected. On the basis of God's past mercies toward him, and his former victories through Him, Job expressed his confidence in His support, provided he could lay his case before Him. But for some wise and blessed purpose, Job was completely unknown to God. God seemed to evade him. In spite of the fact that Job did not understand why God dealt thus with him, he was sure that He had some good purpose in permitting him to suffer as he did. He maintained an implicit faith in God and determined that he would remain true and faithful to him regardless of what it cost.

Southern Bell Will Ask For Rehearing

The increase in telephone rates authorized in the September 1st Order of the Public Service Commission fails by more than one million dollars to provide Southern Bell the earnings the Commission intended to provide, Homer G. Bartee, Southern Bell General Manager for Kentucky, said today, after completing a detailed study of the order.

Mr. Bartee said the Company will ask the Commission on rehearing to fix rates that will provide the earnings the Commission said in its Order were required for the Company.

In his statement Mr. Bartee said "analysis of the Order shows that the new schedule of rates cannot be made to produce earnings of 6% as intended by the Commission. In fact, the new rates will produce earnings of only about 5% at the present time, making

no allowance for the factors which the Commission recognized will depress earnings even further in the very near future."

Mr. Bartee referred to that part of the Commission opinion which reads, "while rates prescribed here-in will produce revenues slightly higher than we believe would be required... nevertheless we must recognize certain factors that will in the near future tend to depress these earnings. An aggressive rural development program increases in employee compensation, and other expense adjustments will in our opinion reduce these theoretical earnings to the neighborhood of 6 per cent."

"Actually," Mr. Bartee said, "the Order is based on operating results for the year 1953 as an average. Since the midpoint of last year, 15 months ago, earnings have been further depressed by high cost construction and other factors recognized in the Commission's Order."

"Testimony presented in the case showed that such reduction in earnings would continue and should be provided for in the new rates."

"From its Order, it is obvious the Commission intended to make allowance for these factors. However, the rates established are not sufficient to provide the rate of return which the Commission intended the Company should have. It is this discrepancy which the Company will ask the Commission to correct in the rehearing."

Not everybody in Calloway county subscribes to The Ledger & Times but nearly everybody reads it.

Tears for the Bride

"You won't be—and I want to know what a close bond I've got with you," she said. "Aw, heck," I said. "You'll come, then?" Suddenly the idea seemed attractive to me. "If you really want to."

"Good. I'll call home tonight. I got up, put on my hat and overcoat." "Where're you going?" "Out to buy a hunting license." She looked pleased. "We'll leave tomorrow afternoon, and come back on Sunday." "Tally-ho," I said, and went out. The Hollis farm was about a hundred miles southwest of Cleveland near a village called Ridge Center. It was pleasant driving in the crisp sunshine with Sandy beside me and the radio tuned to a program of soft dance music. Although Sandy had been with the agency for over two years, she had never told me much about her family. "Madly," I said, "but she married a wholesale grocer from Columbus." "I'm sorry." "Don't be. She's fat now, and stout." "How horrible," she said, laughing. (To Be Continued)

IT DOES LOOK SORT O' NICE THERE

LAURY!!

THE BIBLE SAYS... "ALL IS VANITY AND VEXATION OF THE SPIRIT." I'LL NOT BE HAVIN' VANITY OR VEXATION IN NO DAUGHTER, O' MINE!

YO' WASN'T BORN WITH NO FLOWER IN YER HAIR... AND YOU'LL NOT BE GROWIN' UP AND PUTTIN' AND SMIRKIN' AT NO MAN WITH ONE NEITHER!
